

Summer Travel Part 3: Kids

While sitting on a train staring out the window for me is meditative bliss, my six year old gets a bit restless. A few strategically packed activities make all the difference in the world. Beyond electronics, like my beloved iPad and iPod which help make waiting times roll by with ease, I think it's important to have non-electronic things to do. Good old fashioned writing activities are still fun and stealthily help prepare your child for school. Peaceable Kingdom makes fabulous Write and Wipe Books perfect for the car or plane. They can be reused over and over and traded between children, a couple of these would go a long way. They come in different themes, the Silly and the Spy are my favorites. They also have various card games, like the piratey Crazy Mates which is great for interaction and making new friends. I love the Peaceable Kingdom graphics so much, I wish they would come out with prints, really fun modern stuff.
