Peaceable Kingdom's Cooperative Games Giveaway (Ends 6/8)

We play a lot of board games in our home, it encourages family time as well as incorporates all kinds of skills like taking turns, color recognition, counting and more depending on the game that are great for my children. Recently we added the board game Stone Soup to our game collection that has been enjoyed by the entire family from the company Peaceable Kingdom. It's one of the five new games that Peaceable Kingdom has introduced that are cooperative games for children. Cooperative games are when the children play together to win the game, not just one person wins but you work together to win the game. We have a few different types of cooperative games and at first I didn't know how they would go over, but they really have encouraged my children to work together while still having a lot of fun. These new games from Peaceable Kingdom can all be played in 10-20 minutes, and are made of 100% green products like soy based ink on FSC paper and corn based plastic.

The Stone Soup game has been a lot of fun. Like a matching memory game you work together to get all the vegetables into the pot before the fire is put out. The fire is put out by flipping over fire out cards. There is also a stone soup card that you decide to save or use as a team to get all the vegetables. The game is for kids five and older but my 3.5 year old has no problems playing. I look forward to adding other award winning products from Peaceable Kingdom to our home. Take a look at all that is offered as well as the other Cooperative games.

Win! One lucky Momma In Flip Flops2 reader will win their choice of the five new Cooperative Games from Peaceable Kingdom.
